Pathways:	The unit describes the skills and competencies required to conduct health promotion related to reproductive and sexual health for women as part of primary health care services for Aboriginal and / or Torres Strait Islander communities. This unit is included in the qualifications: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Certificate III in Aboriginal and / or Torres Strait Islander Primary Health Care • Certificate IV in Aboriginal and / or Torres Strait Islander Primary Health Care • Diploma in Aboriginal and / or Torres Strait Islander Primary Health Care Learners who successfully complete this unit will gain credit toward any of the above qualifications and may look at pursuing employment opportunities providing a range of health care services to Aboriginal and / or Torres Strait Islander clients.
Delivery and assessment arrangements:	Delivery mode: The unit is delivered face to face in a classroom environment

Duration and endorsement:

The unit is delivered over three days in a classroom environment. Learning commences four weeks prior to the delivery of face to face training and continues in the learners own time both during and after face to face training. The unit is formally recognised by the Australia Practice Nurses Association and successful participants can log 40 hours of continued professional development points on completion of the unit.

Sessions:

Learners will cover a broad number of subjects in women's sexual health, including, but not limited to:

Women's anatomy and physiology review, reproductive and sexual health across the lifespan, health promotion, pregnancy options, pre-pregnancy education, vulvovaginal health, contraception, cervical screening, breast health, pelvic floor health, sexual assault, domestic violence, obtaining a sexual history, sexually transmitted infections, blood borne viruses, contact tracing.

A pack containing a timetable will be issued to learners in the morning on day one of face to face training. The timetable has been sequenced carefully, according to unit assessment and competency requirements. The timetable is subject to change, depending on the availability of presenters.

Cervical Screening training is offered over two days in addition to the unit and is elective for all learners. This additional training is offered opportunistically, as many learners travel from rural and remote communities for the unit, and would otherwise, not have the opportunity to engage in such training.

Those undertaking cervical screening training must be required to provide cervical screening on a regular basis as part of their employment in order to complete assessment and maintain skills. The learners workplace must agree to provide sufficient and reasonable access to support the learner to complete clinical training, as the majority of the assessment will be carried out in the learner's workplace.

Organisation:

Learners are emailed four weeks prior to face to face training and are provided with the following:

- Student letter / FPWNT map
- USI information
- HLTAHW027 assessment requirements & Unit of competency
- Pre disposing activity – assessment one
- Materials to support pre disposing activity and suggested additional pre reading

Assessment:

A combination of assessment methods will be utilised to determine the learner's competency in the unit. These include oral and written methods, observation, simulation, structured activities, third-party feedback, role play, and +/- a work-based assessment.

Learners will be issued with a unit workbook in the morning on day one. This workbook must be completed and submitted within six weeks of the final day of face to face training.

	The assessment process, benchmarks & outcome, timeframes & submission, resources and support, rights and responsibilities, and disciplinary procedures are clearly outlined in the front of the unit workbook. Learners are responsible for seeking clarification from the facilitator should they need further information regarding assessment. All learners must sign the participant declaration located in the front page of the unit workbook prior to commencing the workbook. Evidence-gathering techniques FPWNT will offer alternative methods of assessment to learners with special needs, subject to discussion and mutual agreement on what is required, on an individual basis. Expectations: Learners are required to attend the full three days of the theory workshop and sign in on the morning of each day. Should a participant need to leave early, arrive late or leave the workshop for any period of time, this will need to be discussed with the facilitator and an alternative solution must be formalised. Learners are expected to complete all assessment to a satisfactory standard in order to be awarded with a 'statement of attainment' for the unit. All expectations including house rules, occupational health & safety requirements, unit information and assessment requirements will be explained in detail during the first session of face to face learning. Throughout the duration of training, learners are expected to abide by FPWNT policy and procedure as outlined in the participant information handbook.
APNA Endorsement (Australian Primary Health Care Nurses Association)	This activity unit HLTAHW027 is currently in the process of re- accreditation by APNA.
